A Mind Reading Craze

By MARTHA V. MONROE

A mind reader had come to town and had given some astonishing public exhibitions. But this had not the effect on the beau monde of an exhibition he gave at the house of Mrs. MacGruder, one of society's leaders. This private entertainment made him fashionable, and every young man who had shaken his brains down into his heels at cotillion parties and every young girl whose aristocratic manners and conserved beauty had given her the right to look down on her sisters who had the brains to take down the dictation of a scientific constructor or a merchant prince was talking about mind reading.

Pete Barnical and Lucy Witridge were sitting together, she on a sofa, he in a chair opposite her. He was holding a skein of yarn on his hands which she was winding into a ball.

"I have heard," said Miss Witridge, "that Mrs. Powelton is very much displeased that Mrs. MacGruder got ahead of her by giving that mind reading exhibition at her house. You see, all society is talking about it. Of course it is greatly to Mrs. MacGruder's credit to have introduced the matter."

"Did the mind reader find out who had the most mind?"

"I don't think that was his object. He told what people were thinking about."

"What were they thinking about?"

"What a question! It wasn't that which was wonderful; it was that he could tell without knowing what they were thinking about."

"How could he tell what he didn't know?"

She lifted her big brown liquid eyes from a tangle in the yarn she was straightening out to his with a kind of puzzled wonder.

"I didn't mean to say," she replied when she had given her brain time to work out an answer, "that he could tell what a person was thinking about without knowing it, but he didn't know it until—until"—

"He found it out," supplied Pete.

"No, not that either. The remarkable feature of his performance was the way he found it out."

"How did he do it?"

"How did he do it? Why, he did it by"— She was stalled again.

"Perhaps he didn't know himself."

"That's it. He said he didn't know how he did it."

"What did he do?"

"He took Billy Perkins' hand and, blindfolded, led Billy to what he was thinking about. Then Mr. Horton wrote something on a piece of paper, folded it, put it in an envelope, put the envelope in a book, put the book on the top of the library, and then the"—

"Where did he put the library?"

"The library! He didn't put that anywhere. It was there already."

"Well, then what happened?"

"The mind reader told what was written on the paper, though he had been blindfolded all the time."

"That's nothing remarkable. I'll bet I can tell what you're thinking about this minute."

"I don't believe you can do any such thing."

"Try me. Think of something, and I'll tell you what it is."

"Very well; I've thought of something."

"A pumpkin."

There was contempt in her expression as she looked at him and replied that she wasn't thinking of any such thing.

"Yes, you were. You were thinking of Tom Baxter. You couldn't think of Tom Baxter without thinking of Tom Baxter's head. Tom Baxter's head is a pumpkin!"

"How ridiculous!" But she did not smile. Indeed, she made the exclamation because she didn't quite grasp the logical conclusion.

"I'll tell you what you do," he proceeded, not giving her time to think it all out. "You fix your mind on something and I'll lead you to it."

She spent some time selecting an object, then told him she was ready. He took her hand and led her to the piano.

"I didn't think of that at all," she said.

"I'll try again," he said, still holding her hand, and he led her to a clock on the mantel.

"Wrong again."

He led her to a tete-a-tete in the center of the room. She didn't say whether he was right or not, nor did he ask her. They sank into their respective seats on the tete-a-tete. He still held her hand.

"I can tell you what you are thinking about," he said.

"What?"

"Tom Baxter."

"I'm not."

"Me."

She did not reply to this. She lowered her eyes.

"And I can tell you," he went on, "what you think I'm thinking about."

"What?"

"You're thinking that I'm thinking that I—that I love you."

There was a great deal more of this intellectual conversation, but at this point it became what the world has heard very often, though it is a question if it tires persons. The mind reader had at least given a young man a reasonable excuse to propose.

But why he went so far out of his way to tell a simple truth that she wanted to hear only persons endowed with sentiment know, and they can't tell.

THE DIXIE PEACEWAY.

"The conference in Chattanooga, Tenn., attended by the governors of Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Georgia, Ohio and Tennessee, or their specially chosen representatives, has for its object the building of a highway from Chicago to Miami, Florida. This long road should be a monument to celebrate the half century of peace within the Union, for it will surpass in potential value and fitness any work which might be designed for that noble purpose by sculptor or architect. The Dixie Highway will be veritably a highway of peace uniting the north adn the south as they have never been united before. Extending from Chicago southward through fertile Indiana and the blue grass regions of Kentucky, over Tennessee's mountains into Georgia, and thence to Miami, on the ocean coast of southern Florida, this broad concrete road will serve as a new bond of sympathy between the states and a new means of industrial development. It should be built to endure, like the old Roman road still traveled in central Europe, and symbolic of the united strength of a great nation.

"The road is the first necessity of industrial civilization and its latest reliance. This highway, which is to extend from the extreme north of the notional domain to the far south, appeals powerfully to the imagination. Its length will exceed a thousand miles, and where else in the whole world could road builders survey a thousand miles so fertile, so rich, and varied in natural resources, so famous for scenic charm and historic associations? The road will run through great cities, through forests, farms, and orchards of incalculable value, through manufacturing districts of rapidly growing importance, upon which the whole world must depend in the future. In southeastern Tennessee it will reach Chattanooga over the Cumberland tablelands, from the southern extremity of which, at Signal Point, on Walden's Ridge, there now exists the first link in the highway, a perfect road of eight miles built by an enterprising citizen of Chattanooga, C. E. James, the originator and chief promotor of this Dixie national highway.

"As a memorial this project of a national highway running north and south must be first regarded . It has other claims, of course. It has a sound practical significance apart from its sentimental and patriotic aspect. The self moving vehicle has enlarged the public comprehension of the value of good roads. People travel now who never traveled under the old conditions. The popular motor car of the hour is cheaper than the horse and carriage of the last generation and it will carry its owner with railroad speed wherever he wants to go. A road from Chicago to southern Florida will be in use all the year. Not alone for pleasure, but, with the rapidly developing utility of the self-moving wagon, it will serve as a powerful influence in the advancement of interstate commerce. Good roads beget good roads. This national enterprise is bound to give an impetus to roadmaking in every state through which the highway runs, and it will create an interest in permanent highways in every direction. Along the whole line roads already existing will be linked with the new highway, stimulating industrial and social development.

"Still, it is a memorial of enduring quality, fitly symbolical of the accord between brethren, bisecting the country from north to south, that this Dixie Highway appeals most strongly to the imagination. In Georgia, for instance, it will run to Atlanta along the very line of Sherman's historic march to the sea, through Chicamauga and Ringgold, Dalton, Resaca, and alongside of Kennesaw mountain and where, fifty years ago, the tramping army, with its followers and its dread caravan of engines of destruction and ambulances, laid a fair country waste, a new army of sturdy workers bearing the implements of peace will be employed to make a reborn country more vigorous and prosperous and its beauties more accessible to the world.

"In the north the Dixie Highway, the great peaceway, will cross the Lincoln highway, which is to extend across the continent, and we may hope that in time another southern highway, running from the eastern states through Virginia southwestward through East Tennessee, one of the fairest spots on earth, may intersect the Dixie highway at Chattanooga and thence run through Alabama, Mississippi, and Louisiana to Texas. Thus the monumental significance of this work is easily comprehended, and upon that aspect of the Dixie road emphasis may justly be laid by its projectors. The Peaceway, we have called it, and as a symbol of lasting peace in this land it appeals best to the generous support of patriotic people of all sections of the country. The Dixie Peaceway is a project of national importance."

When Winifred [illegible] year old she talked [illegible] a jargon of mispronounced [illegible] phrases which only [illegible] translate into understandable [illegible]. Winifred spoke English clearly and correctly, while her vocabulary was more fluent than that of many an adult. When she was five years old she had a talking knowledge of eight languages. She amazed a college professor who came to visit her parents by greeting him politely in Latin and conversing at dinner in the same language. She translated the rhymes of Mother Goose into Esperanto, producing a book which various teachers of that language have found most helpful.

Yet, in the eyes of Winifred's mother, the child's "gift of tongues" is not exceptional. Other American children can do as well, Mrs. Stoner thinks, provided the mother plays the part of teacher.

"What is the best way of teaching a child to talk?" I asked the founder of "natural education."

"From the date of his birth a mother should make a point of talking in good English," promptly replied Mrs. Stoner. "The so-called baby talk, in which so many mothers indulge is a positive obstacle to the development of their little ones. Don't tell your baby that he is an 'itty bitty cunning lokie sing.' Do not start him off in life with a fund of misinformation by assuring him that a train of cars is a choo-choo or his toy lamb a baa-baa.

"A child learns correct English as easily as incorrect English. He unlearns the latter with difficulty, once he has been allowed to acquire it.

"If taught by the natural method of hearing words, rather than of reading them in grammars, a human being learns the languages between the ages of one and five many times more quickly than at any other time. There is no reason why any mother competent to do so should not give her child a grounding in all of the more important foreign languages before the fifth birthday."

The Nutting boat was not the only one pulling out from Daytona Beach Saturday freighted with picnickers. The Gamble picnic party was on hand, and the good boat, Seabreeze, was well loaded with Sunday School students, teachers and officers of the Methodist Sunday school as it pulled out from the Central bridge dock at about 9:30 Saturday morning. However, this company of adults and young people were bound for Turtle Mound, where they spent the day very happily. Mr. Gamble was with the party this time, which they counted as a rare chance, as usually he leaves for the return north before the annual picnic comes off. Mrs. E. R. Curtis, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Haight on Peninsula drive for a couple of months or more, has planned to start back home several times but each time received such discouraging news of the weather from Mr. Curtis that she may remain south until Mr. and Mrs. Haight accompany her home.

Mr. and Mrs. Arnold, who have been occupying rooms in the Willson apartment house, leave this week on their way north.

Mrs. Janvrin and mother, Mrs. Carpenter, who are occupying their winter home on Peninsula drive, leave Thursday on their return to Harvard, Ill.

W. H. Manning, who leased his public garage to Stonestreet & Miller for a year, is planning on a motor trip from here to Kalamazoo, Mich. Mrs. G. W. Manning and daughter, Miss Nellie, closed their home on Halifax avenue today and started for Kalamazoo, Mich., to join Mr. Manning, Sr., at their summer home near that city.

The American League, composed of the younger members of the missionary workers of the peninsula, will meet Saturday evening of this week with Miss Halliday and her young friend, Harley Force, at their home on Earl street.

Mrs John Treadwell entertained about 35 of the young people of the church at the parsonage Saturday evening to give them an opportunity of meeting her sister, Miss George, of Atlanta, Ga., who is with her at this time, and also in compliment of her young friend, Miss Sylva Booth, one of the public school teachers at New Smyrna, who spent from Friday afternoon until Monday morning at the parsonage. Rev. and Mrs. Henry David Darbaker, of Pittsburg, Pa., who had been at St. Cloud part of the season, have secured apartments with Mr. and Mrs. Geo. K. Sweeney. Mr. and Mrs. Darbaker are very enthusiastic over the superior attractiveness of the peninsula towns to any other section of Florida they have visited.

HIGH RECLUSE DIED LONELY

No One Really Knew Her Although She Had Lived in Same Place Many Years.

Kokomo, Ind.—Henrietta Dowell, aged sixty-two, a recluse, died at her home in the eastern part of this city recently. Although a resident here 30 years no one really knew her. Her husband, George W. Dowell, died suddenly a year ago. He, too, was eccentric. They had a large, handsomely furnished home, but never entertained company. No one except servants entered the home for many years. After the death of her husband Mrs. Dowell had no companions except two dogs. One of these died early last winter. She bought an expensive coffin and buried it in the yard at her door. She became ill several weeks ago and was forced to engage a nurse and housekeeper.

Mrs. Dowell leaves real estate valued at $30,000 and much personal property. She possessed a number of diamonds and other valuable jewelry. There is a box in the safety deposit vault of a Kokomo bank that is believed to contain gold coin and jewelry. The heirs are nephews and nieces, ten in number. One of them, Mrs. Bertha Sendra, lives in Indianapolis. Another, Mrs. Eva Craft, lives at Monon. The other eight are brothers and sisters and named Craft, living in Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

COLLIE AIDS IN MILKING

Cuts Out Milch Cows From Herd and Holds Off Calves While Milking Goes On.

Gaffney, S. C.—J. F. Jamison, who lives near Gaffney, has a collie dog which is a most remarkable animal. His master sends him to the pasture with instructions to bring up only the cows which are giving milk, and Nip will confine himself strictly to those instructions. Then Mr. Jamison will tell him to bring all the cows, and he will come driving them all to the barn.

In addition to this, when milking is in progress Nip will seize the calf around the neck with his paws and hold it off while the cow is being milked. The above information was obtained not directly from Mr. Jamison, but from Sheriff Thomas, who is a truthful man, and anyone who doubts the statement will be liable to arrest as soon as he may put foot in Cherokee county.

LONG WOOING ENDS IN COURT

Woman Complains Man Will Not Marry Her Because She Hasn't at Least $20,000.

Portland, Ore.—For 16 years Richard Evans, fifty-three, courted Mrs. Nancy Hills, wrote her endearing letters and promised to marry her, according to her complaint in a breach of promise suit. Then only a few months ago he broke her heart, she alleges, by telling her he wouldn't marry because she didn't have at least $20,000. Mrs. Hills sued for $50,000 heart balm.

Evans is said to be worth $100,000. In his defense Evans states that Mrs. Hills signed a release from their engagement three years ago in consideration of a check for $1,500 and a note for $500. The letters to Mrs. Hills from Evans were generally addressed "Dear Kid," and ended with "kisses."

COUNTY LINE HALTS WEDDING

Bride's Home Located Twenty Feet in Next County Makes Issuing of License There Necessary.

Muncie, Ind.—Because Cora Edith Sizelove lived 20 feet from the Delaware county line in Madison county, it was necessary for her to postpone her wedding to Charles Ray Howell of Cammack, Delaware county. The couple applied at the office of the county clerk in Muncie for a license to marry, when it was found that the bride's home was not in Delaware county by a distance of 20 feet, and that it would be necessary for the couple to go to Anderson to obtain a license, the Indiana law making it compulsory that a marriage license be issued in the county in which the bride is a resident.

TAKES FATHER'S GIVEN NAME

He Has No Son and Wants Heir With Name of a Man, at Any Rate.

Terre Haute, Ind.—Having arrived at the legal age of eighteen, Miss Edith Isabel Teel filed a petition in the circuit court that she may change her name to William Ross Teel, Jr. She is the only child of William Ross Teel, a man of wealth, son of a founder of Terre Haute and the last of his name.

The daughter has talked about changing her name for several years, and has said that if her father cannot have a son for an heir at least he can have a child with a man's name. The petition must be advertised once a week for four weeks before the court can pass on it.

CAPTURED THIEF AT NEW SMYRNA MON.

Monday evening, Officer Tom Milton apprehended at New Smyrna a negro barber who is alleged to have robbed Charlie Irwin's shop ten days ago. Irwin says the other negro worked for him a short while and then slipped away, taking the contents of the shop's cash drawer, and all the razors and other tonsorial tools.

The negro was brought to Daytona, Tuesday morning, and locked in a cell at the city jail. His preliminary trial will be in Justice M. G. Rowe's court later, probably tomorrow. The alleged thief told Mr. Milton that his name is Ellis Booyer. He was known by a nickname during his brief sojourn in Midway.

Nature Supreme.

Not all the product of artificial greeneries are so lovely as that of the fields, the country garden, the fence rows, the first roses, the daffodils, the arbutus which hides under the hillside leaves, the first buds of the rhododendrons and the other forms telling of the life blood drawn direct from the earth, while poor mankind has to take all second hand.

Wily Chinese.

A friend of mine, says a correspondent of the London Chronicle, has just returned from a remote part of China, where he has been laying a railway. He tells me the big difficulty was the graves of Chinamen, over which, of course, no railway is supposed to run. At the outset it looked as if his line, in avoiding these, would become "straighter than a corkscrew, but not so straight as a rainbow." Then he conceived the notion of buying up graves that lay on the coming line of route. The wily Chinese were equal to him, for they dug up the bones of their ancestors and planted them ahead, right in the line of advance. My friend fears that often he paid three times for the same old bones; but ultimately he completed the railway, which now runs in a fairly straight line, except for the first mile or two.

PORT ORANGE ROAD

On the road near Port Orange, Sunday afternoon, occurred an automobile accident, in which three people were more or less seriously hurt. George L. Farrell, his wife and little three-year old daughter were coming north in a Ford car, from the direction of Port Orange.

A puncture caused one of the rear tires to flatten very suddenly, and Mr. Farrell lost control of the machine, which whirled around in the road and then turned over in the ditch. Mrs. Farrell was pitched headlong into a clump of scrub palmetto, but was only slightly injured. The little girl was thrown upon the hard road, receiving a long, deep cut on the side of her face and painful bruises on her body. Mr. Farrell was very severely injured, his most troublesome wounds being in the region of the abdomen, which was ruptured by violent contact with the car's wheels. He was otherwise bruised and cut, but today was able to go to the garage he operates at Daytona Beach.

The little girl was still confined to bed, Tuesday morning, but it is not thought that her injuries are of a permanent nature, except for the scar that may be left on her face when the cut heals.

Shortly after the accident occurred, P. J. Theus, of this city, came along in his car, and after doing what he could to relieve the victims of the wreck, brought them to their home in Daytona Beach and summoned surgical aid.

The Ford car, being considerably damaged, was left in the ditch.

LARGE MAN TAKEN FOR JESS WILLARD

"SHORTY" CLARK, SIX FEET TEN INCHES TALL AND WEIGHT 295 POUNDS, VISITED DAYTONA MONDAY.

"Shorty" Clark, six feet ten inches tall and weighing 295 pounds, was a visitor to Daytona Monday. Mr. Clark has a front name besides "Shorty" but no one ever uses it. Mr. Clark sells cigars; he also attracts attention as he walks along the street.

Clark was in St. Augustine the other day and as he stepped from the train a man behind him whispered to a small boy the word, "Willard." Immediately a crowd began to follow Mr. Clark. He went into a barber shop to get a shave and when he got out of the chair the barber shop was filled with curious people who wanted to get a look at one they thought to be the world's champion slugger. It was some time before Mr Clark realized why he aroused so much curiosity and when he did realize it, he says he had sense enough to know he could sell no cigars in the Ancient City so he picked up his grip and came to Daytona. Mr. Clark is said to be the largest man who ever visited Daytona.

Slavery Originated in the East.

Absolute slavery seems to have appeared in the eastern colonies somewhat earlier than in the southern, for slavery existed in New York in 1628, in New Jersey in 1628, in Massachusetts in 1630, in Connecticut in 1631 and in Delaware in 1636. There was a statutory recognition of slavery in Massachusetts in 1641, which was considerably ahead of such recognition of slavery in Virginia or Maryland.

Cries Not Caused by Pain.

A well-known merchant of New York has a $5 gold piece that he swallowed as a child of five immediately after its presentation to him. Doctors were summoned by twos and three and stomach pumps brought in a hurry. While waiting the little chap cried and cried, refusing to be soothed. His mother, hugging and moaning over her boy, supposed the cries meant pain. Just before the doctors came, however, a sharp inquiry by the donor of the gold piece brought out the sobbing statement by the little chap that he wasn't in pain, but he wanted his gold piece back. Immediately another piece was placed in his hand and almost immediately his cries ceased.
